HONGKONG, FRIDAY, AUGUST 30, 1878. WE have been informed that the reference made by a correspondent "P." to Wharry's action against the Chaplains visiting the Civil Hospital does not quite convey the real facts. It is now stated that the Doctor was annoyed at a Protestant clergyman reading aloud in one of the wards, and in consequence prohibited the visits of all chaplains alike. Upon this being reported to the proper quarter, the hasty prohibition was removed, and the Doctor's extreme action thereby disapproved. That Dr Wharry desired to stop promiscuous visits to the wards is not surprising, and that such an attempt was made by him not very long since shows that the clerical gentlemen 11 A.M., Post Office closes except for Late who now undertake such visits to the Hospital must have been perfectly conscious of the delicacy of the duty they were endeavouring to perform. Dr Wharry, however, so far as we can discover, did not complain of any actual interference on the part of the Chaplains with the medical treatment au81 of his patients. We think it is only fair to say this, and we say it with the greater readiness because such serious acts of indiscretion as those now alleged, if done by any chaplain, be he Protestant or Roman Catholic, deserve not only to be at once censured, but to be

There is always a certain amount of attractiveness in ascertaining the opinions of others in regard to ourselves or our proceedings. The same rule holds good with respect to nations. Englishmen are naturally a little ourious to know what their continental neighbours think of the position taken by John Bull on nes the Eastern Question, and of the Anglo-Turkish Convention. We have before us translations of articles, referring to the latter subject, that have appeared in some of the leading French, German, Italian and Spanish newspapers. It will be recollected that the Reuter's telegrams professing to give the opinions of the continental press on the Anglo-Turkish Convention, by virtue of which England occupies Cyprus, were a little vague, and did not agree with the fuller telegrams in the Indian papers. One of Reuter's telegrams, dated the 9th July stated : "The English and foreign press approve warmly of the Convention, but the Daily News condemns the arrangement;" another, dated the following day, added "The greater part of the Continental Press have no objection to the transfer of Cyprus;" while the third, and only remaining reference made by Reuter to foreign opinion regarding the Convention, stated i "The German and Austrian semi-official journals approve the Anglo-Turkish Convention." The accuracy of these telegrams may be pretty well judged by the following excerpts from continental journals both semi-official and unofficial. France being the country most likely to feel aggrieved by the Convention, we will deal first of all with the French papers. Here we find little that need annoy Englishmen. Of the three erticles, from leading French papers that are the fore us, only one appears to argue that the Convention'is detrimental to the interests of France and ought to be resent ed. Says La Patrie of Paris, in its issue of the July 12th :-

Open your map of Europe, and cast your eye on the magnificent sea lying between Europe, Asia, and Africa; it is the Mediterranean. Its entrance is guarded by a fortress-Gibraltar; English flag, English Further on, towards the middle, where the sea becomes narrower, there is in the midst of the waves a citadel-Malta. It too bears English guns, and over it floats the British flag. At the Eastern extremity lies another island, which commands the vast basin surrounded by Asia Minor Turkey in Asia, and the mouths of the Nile with the Suez Canal. It is Cyprus, virtue of the Convention of the 4th June, this advanced sentinel is to be cocupied by English troops and has already hoisted the English flag. While these things were being done, our Government and the Parisians were indulging in delirious rejoicings, which they called " national" Patriotic shame forbids us to dwell upon it. If we had had real diplomatists, this is what would have happened: When the Anglo-Turkish Treaty was announced to the Congress, the French scarcely made up their minds Plenipotentiaries would have replied: " To- the morrow a French squadron will occupy Tunis, which is only a continuation of our Algerian possessions. We leave it to Italy tion. to take care of Tripoli." If this haughty and equitable reply had been made, the Congress would have assented, the prestige of France would have been raised again, cional, of Madrid, for instance, thinks more simple operations, of annexing any and the amour propre of our diplomatists would have taken a fine revenge. But this reply was not made, and our prestige and interests have received an irreparable blow. The Journal des Debats takes a much more moderate and philosophical view of the matter. It argues that the object of England was to check Russian encroachments in Asia, and, to render the protectorate she has established over Asiatic Turkey for that purpose effectual, she needed a military station further Fast and larger than Malta. France prefers an English to a Russian protectorate over the Sultan's dominions, and one or the other was almost inevitable. "We have already set forth," says our contemporary, "the many reasons that induced us to incline towards England, our naturally ally-our next of kin as regards manners and customs, ideas liberal principles, and matters of trade. We have known quite well that at sea England is stronger than we are, -and we have long been reconciled to that superiority. . . . For colonisation, for the management and education of semibarbarous races, the English have qualities which we do not possess. But in spite of our disasters and our present weakness we have in the clearness of our intellect and our language, in the force of propaganda which is innate, a strength which no one can diminish or deteriorate but ourselves; and the surestway of doing so is to yield to the delusive mirage of false ideas—to the impulses of ill temper and petty spite. Let us get rid of these evil penchants of our character, and be convinced that we shall remain a great people unless we try to destroy our greatness with our own hands. Le Temps writes in much the ▼ same strain : opinion in France against England ; the protests of some of our papers against the treaty of the 4th of June are noted with pleasure. and it is evident that the Germans would delight to see the cordial relations existing poned. between the two nations replaced by distrust and mutual animosity. The National Zeitung has particularly distinguished itself in this line. They go further than this in Russia. The Russian diplomatists have carrying Her Majesty's Mails has been acfound means of causing to be inserted in the columns of the Times the news of an approaching Franco-Russian alliance, immediately deffied, it is true, by the same

Steamer Gaelic, Captain go further, and say that the English alliance, which we have always regarded as the natural alliance of France, has never been so necessary, so called for by circumstances, as it is now. It is not at a time when the bonds that unite the three Empires have been drawn closer by the settlement of the Turkish question that we should exhibit such heedless touchiness towards a nation whose aid we need as she needs ours, hama. Had the Angle-Ottoman Convention been brought Az the Marine Court to-day, Antonio under the consideration of the Congress, the voice of Italy would certainly have been heard with effect; but in present circumstances it must suffice for Ita y that she has the consciousness of not having sacrificed at Berlin in the interests of peace even one of those principles which are the stronghold of civilized peoples.

L'Italie, another journal published at Rome, speaks in a tone equally hostile against the Convention. La Perseveranza, the Opposition organ, published at Milan, takes a more moderate visw of the mat-70r :--

Many Italian papers expressed astonishment and indignation at the announcement of the Anglo-Turkish Treaty; and some of at Ship Street, Wanchai. The constable them went so far as to publish news which would render us ridiculous on the other side of the Alps, if it got across them. The occupation of Cyprus by England may appear to us a subject of regret; but it is as well to add at once that there would have been no probability of our acquiring it, nor any reason why we should do so. and that Italy would have been in no way able, in exchange for such an acquisition, to tiken by England, or to derive from it wounded men bled profusely, but he still happiness of Asiatic Turkey, which will certainly be drawn from it by England. Let us first render ourselves capable of great things, and then complain because great things are done by others.

In the articles from the German papers to hand no very decided expressions of opinion seem to be given with respect to the Convention. The following excerpt from the National Zeitung of Berlin contains the most decided one we find

The treaty which the Porte concluded with England on the 4th of June will be more fatal for them than the Treaty of San The anger of the French and Italians at England's selfishness and boldness will avail nothing. The fact remains to the glory of Lord Beaconsfield that, without drawing the sword, he forced the Russians to give up their most important claims in Europe, and, while leaving them an unfruitful and thinly populated strip of territory and a harbour, procured for his own country the hegemony in Asia Minor, and gave her arms and resources for the inevitable struggle of the future.

The Spanish papers appear to have matter: but taken as a whole comments cannot be regardunfavourable to the Conven-Gibraltar is, however, occasionally rather curiously mixed up with the masterly manner by means of the house question of Cyprus. The Parellon Nathat Spain, though as deeply interested navigation of the Mediterranean, may vention a kind of relachement on the $200 was carried away. Things of very part of England, as regards the necessity small bulk are most in favour with this and even the desire of that maritime successful and strangely long-lived gang Power to remain in possession of Gibraltar | The Parlamento, of Madrid, draws the lesson from the easy acquisition by England of Cyprus that "nations governed by representative institutions go on increasing in importance, inspire the most ambitious with respect, and are looked up to for salvation by the vic-time of misfortune." On the whole, we do not think Englishmen have any reason to be dissatisfied with the way in which their sudden and unexpected acquisition of Cyprus has been received by the overwhelming majority of the papers in France, Italy, Germany, Spain, and, we may add, Austria. There has naturally been a certain amount of irritation at a fresh addition England's possessions in the Mediterranean, but considering the fact that such an acquisition on the part of any other country would assuredly not have been tolerated for one moment by the Powers generally of Europe, we think John Bull can well afford to forgive and forget any harsh criticisms that have been bestowed upon him in regard to the Anglo-Turkish Convention.

A DARING thief was caught last night shortly after midnight by a Sikh constable stopped him in the street as he was makingoff with his booty, but the thief had evidently gone out with a determination not to be interfered with. He was armed with a fan-dagger and a double-barrelled pistol. He did not hesitate one moment to use the degger, but stabbed the constable twice in the nesk, infloting severe wounds. The Assistance having arrived, the would-be murderer was lodged safely in the Police cells, and the wounded Constable, whose bravery is deserving of some commendation, was conveyed to Hospital, and is now considered out of danger. The thief was taken before the Magistrate to-day and remanded.

The verandah-blind rope was used as a sort of ladder as well as to tie up the thief's home-made hook, and a piece of glass was neatly cut out of the glass door to enable him to undo the inner bolt. Having thus done his outside work in a holder's own materials, he ventured upon hi thing that came to his hand. In this h was unfortunately but too successful. CHARGE OF SELLING SPURIOUS BRANDY. The charge against Christian Koch, for selling brandy which is said to have been poisonous, was resumed to-day. The Urown Bolicitor (Mr E. Sharp) appeared to conduct the prosecution; Mr Wotton to watch the case on behalf of Messrs. Ed. Schellhaus & Co., and Mr J. J. Francis for the defendant and the other publicans who had been summoned. James Clarke, a lance-corporal of the the liquor.

Sergeant Toomey was then again called, and spoke as to the method he adopted when he received the various bottles so as to be able to identify them again. The witness was subjected to a severe crossexamination by Mr Francis, who endeavoured to shew that the identity of the particular bottle which had been analyzed could not be traced to any particular house, as it was not labelled immediately it was received. It appears, however, that the bottles, or the wrappers rather, were marked about 5 minutes after Thales arrived from Hongkong with a cargo they were received at the Sergeant's

Mr Niedhardt was then called and crossexamined. He said the bottle of brandy from the "City of Hamburg" was analyzed on the 22nd July. It took only one day to analyze it. ### Ohina. FOOCHOW.

(Herald, Aug. 22nd.) H B. M.'s Gunboat Swinger left Pagods Anchorage, for a cruise, on the 19th inst. Thunderstorms have prevailed during the week, and there are evident indications of an early change in the monsoon. Th crops are, we hear, in a very backward state, and much more rain than has yet fallen is needed to ensure a good harvest.

H. E. the Acting Governor-Pao Hông -paid a farewell visit to the foreign consuls this afternoon. His Excellency leaves for the North to morrow in one of the Arsenal gunboats. Pao Hông has been chiefly remarkable during his term of office in this province for an easy going disposition. In his intercourse with foreign officials he has, we believe, shewn an invariable friendly spirit. The anti-foreign gentry of Wu shih shan have, we hear, abstained from any further demonstrations of hostlity during the past week. It is generally understood that the missionaries still decline to waive their right to the property in question-notwithstanding the strong efforts made in certain quarters to induce them to yield to the Fung-shui-ites.

Prayers for rain were, we understand, ordered at the Bhuddist Monastery Kushan last week. After two days of hard praying the much needed rain came. The bonzes, who were of course greatly elated, thereupon shut up their rattle-traps dulcimers, gongs, drums, and other instruments of torture, and, we are reliably informed, sent a pures-opening reminder to the officials and gentry.

We gleaned from evilence which was laid before the Court 1.That the plaintiffs had done their best to procure a charter as agents for the vessel 2-That (as admitted by Capt, Blanchard) they were distinctly informed in raply to their question " whether they might close that ovening (9th inst.) at 15 cents for Shanghal," that he (the master) would not accept less than 18 cents per picul. 8-That within an hour after expressing such determination, Captain Blanchard was induced by Mezzra, F. A. Schultze & Co., storeksepers, to sign a charter party for 18 cents, as previously offered by the plaintiffs. or rather refused by defendant. The defendant denied his liability, and in his evidence on oath stated that in refucing a charter for less than 18 cents from the plaintiffs he did not intend to be Bound thereby not to accept whatever he chose from anyone else. In reply to plaintiff's Suestion, why he desired to place his agenta in a less favourable light than others I he sould only repeat that the refunal to accept

After the discovery of fire in the godown the smoke was so dense, both in the store and in the dwelling rooms, that to escape with life only was all that the inmates could do; three of the servants, indeed, having to escape by a ladder from the dining room windows. The two foreign engines were on the spot very shortly after the alarm was mediately afterwards, the latter in very good order, the one from the Railway doing especial good service. All that the engines could do however, was to save the neighouring properties, and this they did.
